

Tise turned second-hand shopping into a strategic asset

SPHERE — E-COMMERCE PLATFORMS

Tise built a social marketplace that made second-hand fashion attractive, accessible and engaging.

By combining a strong consumer proposition with marketplace network effects, the company attracted eBay as a strategic acquirer in 2025.

NOK210.5M

2025 REVENUE

+10.4%

REVENUE GROWTH IN 2025

2025

ACQUIRED BY EBAY

INVESTMENT THESIS

Tise turned social second-hand shopping into a scalable marketplace that attracted a strategic exit to eBay.

from BELIEF to BANKABILITY

Making second-hand shopping mainstream

Tise recognised that consumers would embrace resale for more than sustainability alone.

Fashion, affordability and social discovery made second-hand shopping desirable, while the digital platform made buying and selling convenient.

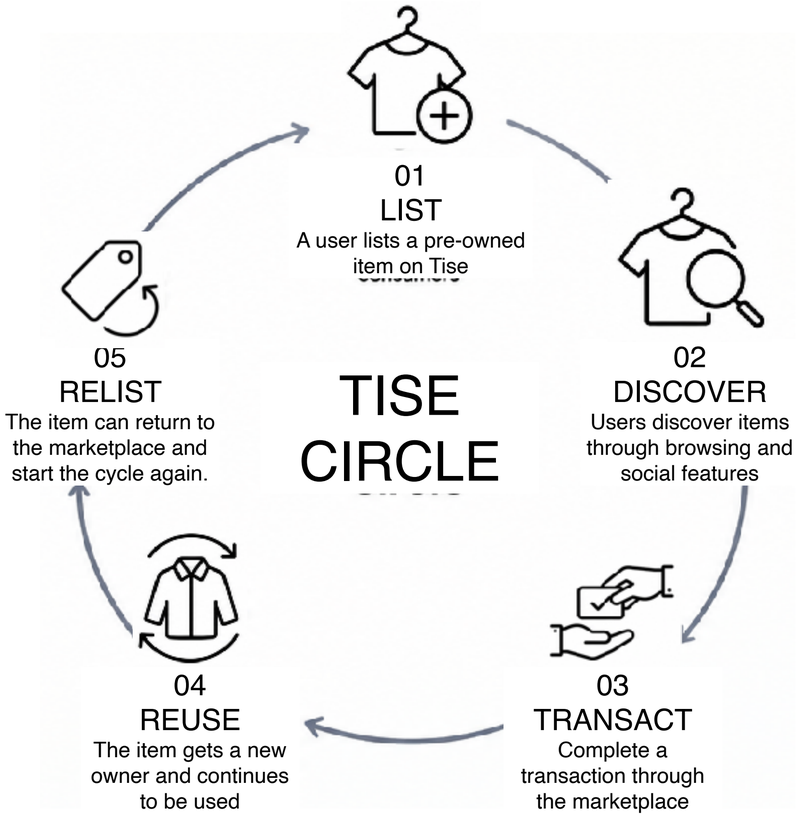

THE RESULT

A marketplace with the potential to grow as more buyers and sellers joined.

Keeping fashion in use for longer

Tise makes circular consumption work by connecting people who want to sell pre-owned items with people who want to discover and buy them.

Products can find new owners and be listed again, extending their useful life.

Tise connects the environmental benefit of extending product life with the consumer benefits of price, discovery and personal style.

From Resale to Exit

Tise progressed from an early-stage Norwegian startup to a Nordic resale platform backed by investors and ultimately acquired by eBay. The investment journey shows how a consumer proposition can develop into an asset with strategic relevance to a global marketplace.

2013-2016
FOUNDED

Founded in Norway by Eirik Frøyland Rime and Axel Franck Næss. The mobile marketplace combined second-hand fashion with social features. Jenny Skavlan joined as an investor and creative partner.

2018-2021
FUNDING AND SCALE

NOK 60 M in 2020 at valuation of NOK 225 M. Followed by approx NOK 90 M in 2021 at a valuation of NOK 490 M.

2022
STRATEGIC INVESTOR ENTERS

Raised NOK 200 M from eBay Ventures, Bring Ventures, Nysnø Climate Investments and existing investors, at a valuation of approx NOK 857 M.

2025
STRATEGIC EXIT TO EBAY

eBay announced the acquisition in September 2025 and completed it on 1 October. Valuation of approx NOK 1.3bn.

An engaged user community and differentiated social-commerce capabilities created strategic value for a global marketplace operator.

Built to Scale

Consumer appeal: Fashion, affordability and social discovery encourage participation beyond environmental motivation alone.

Network effects: A broader selection attracts buyers, while more buyers make the platform more attractive to sellers.

Strategic fit: eBay can potentially strengthen the marketplace through its technology, AI capabilities, payments, search and global infrastructure.

The eBay acquisition offers a clear strategic rationale: Combine Tise's community and social-commerce model with eBay's capabilities and scale.

THE INVESTOR TAKEAWAY

Strategic value creates an exit before profitability is proven

Tise illustrates how an investor can create value by backing a business that changes consumer behaviour, builds a scalable platform and becomes strategically relevant to a larger player.

01 LOOK FOR A REAL CONSUMER LEAD

Make circular behaviour desirable and convenient. Tise used fashion, value and social discovery to make second-hand shopping part of everyday life.

02 AN ASSET THAT BECOMES MORE VALUABLE WITH SCALE

An engaged community, a broad product selection and marketplace network effects can make a platform increasingly attractive to strategic buyers.

03 UNDERSTAND THE EXIT BUYER'S STRATEGIC LOGIC

eBay could acquire an established Nordic community and social-commerce capabilities rather than building the same position from scratch.

THE TAKEAWAY

Tise shows how a circular marketplace can create investable strategic value by making resale desirable, scaling through network effects and ultimately attracting a strategic acquirer.

BANKABILITY INDICATORS

1. PROVEN CONSUMER ADOPTION

With 2.5M+ registered users, 150K daily active users and 6.5M items sold, Tise demonstrated demand for second-hand fashion by combining affordability, discovery and social engagement.

2. MARKETPLACE NETWORK EFFECTS

A growing community of buyers and sellers strengthens product selection, discovery and selling opportunities, creating a scalable platform that becomes more valuable as participation increases.

3. PROVEN STRATEGIC EXIT

eBay acquired Tise in 2025 at a reported valuation of approximately NOK 1.3bn. The deal demonstrated how a differentiated circular marketplace can create strategic value for a global platform, even before profitability is proven.

”Circularity becomes truly powerful when it’s an attractive lifestyle choice for everyone.

Tise has done this at scale in the Nordics, enabling a successful exit eBay, to the world's leading marketplace. ”

Lene Elizabeth Hodge
Investment manager Nysnø

from BELIEF to BANKABILITY

A Nordic initiative turning circular ideas into investable business

NORDIC CIRCULAR INVESTMENTS